

SOME QUESTIONS FOR "HARVE"

Senator M. Harvey Taylor, Chairman, Republican State Committee, Harrisburg, Penna.

Dear Senator Taylor:

May we ask a few questions concerning your comment at the recent Republican State Committee meeting, when you, as presiding officer, spoke as follows:

"I know you all have your favorites for President." (In an aside to the audience: "I guess they are squirming here in back of me.") "I won't say anything more, except this — don't try to build up your favorite by trying to destroy some other good Republican."

What we wish to know is this: How are the delegates to choose intelligently between the two leaders, or among the other possibilities, unless the weak points of each are to be considered along with their strong points?

Isn't it a fact that for the past twenty years, we Republicans have been picking nominees who looked strong and victorious, so long as only their assets were regarded, but all of whom turned out in the course of the campaigns to have fatal liabilities which cost our party its success in November?

And isn't it a fact that these liabilities had been analyzed before and during the convention, and sufficiently well understood in advance, we Republicans might have won any or all of these disastrous campaigns?

How else, except by bringing these possible weaknesses out into the open and studying them are we to avoid the same pitfalls this year? Have you some process in mind by which we can escape hidden flaws and unnoticed defects in the potential candidates unless we have frank and free discussion of them, pro and con, before the convention meets?

Isn't it true, Senator Taylor, that this "no criticism" doctrine is the special strategy produced for the purpose of keeping the delegates from a realistic comparison of General Eisenhower with Senator Taft, "Mr. Republican"? Isn't its sole purpose in this pre-campaign maneuvering that of concealing from the public the complete lack, on the General's part, of any prior contacts either with the ramifications of the national government, or any experience in organizing and conducting a political campaign. Weaknesses which strongly contrast with the fact that Senator Taft is the best informed and most experienced Republican in the country on the key national issues, and moreover has scored some of the most impressive Republican victories seen in recent years.

Isn't it true, also, that whereas the pro-Eisenhower people say constantly in public that, "you mustn't criticize our favorite," they in turn are quite merciless, as well as unscrupulous, in attacking Taft, calling him everything from anti-labor to anti-American, describing him as reactionary, indecisive, humorless, colorless and a man who simply "can't win," in spite of the fact that the record shows he always has won, and carried Ohio two years ago, against much the same sort of opposition he would face this fall, by the biggest majority in that state's history?

Do you consider it unfair, a form of "destroying a good Republican," to point out that it took General Eisenhower something better than half a century to make up his mind whether he was Republican or Democratic, or that he has never in his life worked with or through a political organization, or that he, unlike Taft, who twice out-debated President Truman on the national air-waves, has never gone before the people championing either a political party or a political philosophy?

Is it irrelevant, impertinent and immaterial to point out that General Eisenhower has spent this spring, during the time when nearly eighty per cent of the delegates have been chosen, pussyfooting among the issues, taking a bold and determined straddle on all controversial subjects and threatening that even if nominated he will do no more than discuss these momentous problems in platitudes and generalities?

Is it out of order to mention such a point, for example, as the fact that multitudes of our citizens are deeply opposed

The parade was headed by a car containing the Hon. Congressman Karl C. King and Burgess I. Johnston Hetherington. Hetherington acted as master of ceremonies at the cemetery.

Addressing the group Hetherington said: "Today is a day of memories, especially for the men who saw service in the wars. America has a short memory. The only ones who remember are those who received telegrams informing them that they had lost loved ones. We should pay tribute to the men buried here and all over our country, who gave their lives so that we, our children, and our children's children, could enjoy the American way of life."

Burgess Hetherington advised the group of the necessity of a reawakening to spiritual values. He deplored the state of decay into which our moral code has fallen. He propounded a return to religion and the primary principles on which our nation is founded.

The burgess introduced Jake Hellings of Bristol and Thomas Roberts of Crofton, who are veterans of the Spanish-American War. He also introduced Hugh Daley, commander of the Bracken Post; Mrs. Dettmer, pres't of the Bracken Post Ladies Auxiliary; Commander Henry R. Today's Quiet Moment

By Philip Weiss, Pastor
Oxford Valley Chapel

As we have meditated on the fourth Chapter of Philippians this week, our hearts have truly been blessed with the fact that in such troubled times in a troubled world, peace of mind can be our portion if we but trust in the One who alone can give it. None of us deserve the mercies of God, yet, by His grace we have received of His manifold mercies. It is because of His grace we have salvation and all spiritual and temporal blessings. Every Christian should praise the Lord for His grace for by it we have peace and can preach peace to them who are afar off.

With the benediction of Paul found in II Thess. 3:16, we want to close our meditations together. Now, the Lord of peace Himself give you peace always by all means.

Bunn Wins Grind At Langhorne Speedway

PENNDLE, May 31 — Holly Bunn of Bristol, Conn., taking the lead on the 82d lap, went on to win the 100-mile modified stock car race at Langhorne Speedway yesterday in one hour, 23 minutes and 04.51 seconds.

Rain fell during the final 35 miles of the event. Ray Baxter of New York was second and Rod Schaefer of Morrisville finished third.

Bunn moved into the lead when race-setting Russ Truolove, Waterbury, Conn., was forced into the pits and eventually out of the race. The victory netted Bunn $5,300.

A crowd of 8,500 saw Bunn maintain a steady grind to gain his triumph. A field of 48 cars started the event but, by the time

Bunn crossed the finish line, only 16 were still in the running. Five spectators were given first aid treatment on the scene after they were struck by the runaway right rear wheel of the car of Bill Errico, Newtown. The tire bounced off a railing before rolling into the group.

Memorial Day Tribute Paid Those Who Served Country

Millions of men have said, with Patrick Henry, 'Give me liberty or give me death' — said it perhaps not with his eloquence, but said it by their deeds in offering themselves on the battlefields of American history.

"We Americans have come to a great crossroads of destiny. I want you to think over the major decisions we must make, as a people and as a nation, within the next few months.

"The world as it used to be has come apart at the seams. Even in the brief space since you and I were in school, the face of the earth has changed. Old nations have fallen, new powers have risen. New theories and new concepts have sprung up. We are in a great testing time. Many have been called, and few chosen. The pillars of civilization have been shaking. Race after race has lost its way on the road to destiny. We can easily see the wreckage which has resulted where other countries have made mistakes.

"The great issue before the American people is whether to cling to the principles of government which these we honor on Memorial Day fought for and died to preserve, or whether to let these slip away and seize upon the new concepts brought forward within the present generation.

"How much is liberty worth to us? Our national cemeteries are filled with those who thought it worth dying for. Do we think it worth exerting ourselves for, worth working for, worth studying for, worth being interested in and getting others interested?

"When the American colonies rose against Great Britain, 176 years ago, and proclaimed liberty and independence in this Western Hemisphere, the act burst upon the consciousness of the world as perhaps only one other event in history — the birth of Christ.

"American freedom, the American concepts of government, modified the thinking of all the races of earth. Up to within the past two or three decades, the American pattern was the envy of all. We led the world, not only in commerce and production, but in the field of inspiration.

"How many of us today still understand and still revere the everlasting principles upon which this free nation was founded — the principles of equal justice for all, of God-given native-born rights which government dare not abridge, of the inherent freedom and dignity of the individual, of the right of each citizen to think as he will, worship as he chooses, and to seek happiness after his own fashion?

"Do we still hold up these models for our children? Do our schools teach them, and our churches, and our press, and our radio, and all the other many instruments of education advocate them?

"Daniel Webster said that 'God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it.' Two thousand years earlier, the Greek philosopher Aristotle expressed the same thought — that 'liberty and equality will be best attained when all persons alike share in the government to the utmost.'

"Do not misunderstand me — I'm not talking politics; I'm not telling you to vote for or against any candidate, not telling you to support or oppose any party.

"Patriotism, zeal for the preservation of all that is splendid in our Constitution, is not the exclusive prerogative of any political party. Whichever party you consider to be yours, you will find in it those who have a deep and never-dying loyalty to the concepts of our founding fathers, who brought forth upon this continent the most nearly perfect system of government which it has ever been mankind's lot to discover.

"I am asking you to learn and to understand that system of government, asking you to refuse to consider discarding it for any other until you have examined both of them fully.

"Liberty and justice are the cornerstones of our free government. Justice has but one true guardian, and that consists of independent and high-principled courts which can fearlessly uphold the rights of the weak against the pressures of the mighty.

"Never in five thousand years of history has mankind even dimly glimpsed any other avenue to justice. A free and uncorruptible judiciary is humanity's hope, so far as justice is concerned. Whatever contaminates our courts is a dagger at the throat of justice, a knife in the back of every man's rights.

"As for liberty, again mankind has wrestled with the problem for all the ages he has been living together, and he has found only one principle which gives citizens a chance to preserve their freedom against the encroachments of government.

"The principle was discovered ages ago, but it has been only within recent centuries that it has been put into effect as the fruit of long and stubborn warfare conducted by heroes risen out of the ranks of freedom-loving peoples.

"The principle is that the laws shall be written, and the taxes shall be levied, only by representatives chosen by the people themselves, and answerable only to the people. This is the legislative principle, in this country taking the form of a national Congress that is one of the three separate branches of our Federal government.

"In the time which it has been my happy privilege to serve you as your Representative in Congress, I have heard Congress upbraided and scolded, condemned and derided, often by those who understood only faintly what the purpose of Congress is, and what it has been seeking to do.

"Congress is the people's own special branch of our government. It is the only one which the people elect directly, and the only one which comes back at frequent intervals to render an accounting to the people.

"Winning by the American people of the right to choose their own Congress was one of the greatest and most prized accomplishments of the American Revolution.

"Let me remind you of just one point — that when the early American heroes of the Revolution won victories against the British, they proudly proclaimed those victories as being 'in the name of the Continental Congress.'

"Ladies and gentlemen, Abraham Lincoln expressed what is in the heart of all those who rise to consecrate the memory of fallen war heroes.

"He said that in their lives and in their deaths, these heroes already have hallowed the ground in which they lie.

"The great thing, Lincoln said, is for us the living to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought have thus far so nobly advanced.

"That is what I have been trying to say to you. Generation after generation of Americans furnished the flower of its youth, first to create the nation, then to save it united under one flag, and more recently to hurl back those who conspired against it from abroad.

"Friends and fellow Americans, what the blood and tears of these fallen predecessors of ours so nobly won for us, and so bravely preserved in the critical hours of the past, let us hereby resolve to maintain and protect, to labor for and love, all the days of our lives."

Three Boroughs Join In Memorial Parade

Robert Armstrong an 8th grade pupil, was presented with the American Legion school award medal. When the parade reached the Woods School, Bellevue avenue, a bouquet of red, white and blue flowers was presented by Mrs. William Gotthardt, Bristol twp., on behalf of Hulmeville Boy Scout troop, to Mr. Keating, Philadelphia, half-breed Indian who marched (in Indian costume) with the troop.

The second parade in Langhorne was staged by members of Langhorne Memorial Association, following a special Memorial service in Langhorne A. M. E. Church. The James Moore Memorial Band led the group, with Mitchell Davis Post, American Legion, and its junior drum and bugle corps following in blue and white uniforms. Girl and

Boy Scout groups, school children, and a float were included.

A number of the same groups which participated in Langhorne parade continued through Penndel and Hulmeville. The line of march was joined in Hulmeville, however, by Hulmeville school children, Girl Scouts and Brownies, Richard A. Hopkins, past commander of Soby Post, was marshal for Hulmeville parade; and the Neshaminy high school band was the official musical group there. The Parkland AMVETS stood at attention during the program in Hulmeville Memorial Park, a squad from this unit firing a salute to the dead.

Welcome was extended by former burgess of Hulmeville, Samuel J. Illick. The prayer was by the Rev. E. Clarendon Hyde, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Hulmeville; and the high school band provided selections. For one of these "Military Escort," Sally Hall did a twirling solo. "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address" was given by "Jack" Crawford. The American Legion school medal for honor, courage, scholarship, leadership, service and companionship, was presented to Patricia Foster by Peter Kutger, a member of Soby Post. Thirty seconds of silence was observed in memory of the war dead.

The thought about which the Rev. Edward W. Stuess, pastor of Neshaminy Methodist Church, wove his remarks was that "merely to remember those who have gone before is not enough. . . . Memory alone can hardly be worthy honor for those who gave their all." The "crucial question" he added is: "Can all these agonies, and wound-bearing and blood-shed teach us to live?" the clergyman said that "We are possibly closer to total war than to total peace," and reminded of the meaning behind the sacrifices made by those who served their country well.

He expressed the thought that possibly "The people of this day and generation have become so pre-occupied they have forgotten the things of spiritual significance."

to the concept of putting a professional career soldier in the White House, bitterly determined to raise up no Bismarks in America; and that such factors as the General's determination to set up universal military training might easily lose us millions of votes?

You ask for unity and, if we understand you aright, for no critical analysis of the candidates. You of all people ought to be in good position to see the fallacies of such a program.

You were State Chairman back in 1936 when the Republican national convention, in a perfect tempest of unity, with almost complete unanimity, on the first ballot, not a voice of criticism or warning to be heard, nominated another Man from Kansas, whose broad position politically is quite similar to that nebulous stand taken by General Eisenhower, of whom in fact it might be said with some justice that that the General is another Alf Landon, in khaki.

We had unity, that year, and we had abundant optimism before the campaign, and we had no critical judgment exercised in the selection of our candidate.

What happened? We lost Pennsylvania by more than 650,000. The phrase, "Taft can't win", continues to echo. Taft won Ohio two years ago by 600,000 majority. How did the last Man from Kansas make out there? Landon lost Ohio in 1936 by more than 700,000 votes.

Isn't it possible, Senator, that you are wrong in this matter, and that what we Republicans ought to do, instead of sticking our heads in the sands as regards the disqualifications of some of our potential candidates, is to run them through the gauntlet of the most vigorous and open criticism, and then, instead of backing an untried and untested champion in the race, pin our faith on the man who stands up best under the most exacting inspection.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR "HARVE"

Senator M. Harvey Taylor,
Chairman,
Republican State Committee,
Harrisburg, Penna.
Dear Senator Taylor:

May we ask a few questions concerning your comment at the recent Republican State Committee meeting, when you, as presiding officer, spoke as follows:

"I know you all have your favorites for President." (In an aside to the audience: "I guess they are squirming here in back of me.") "I won't say anything more, except this — don't try to build up your favorite by trying to destroy some other good Republican."

What we wish to know is this: How are the delegates to choose intelligently between the two leaders, or among the other possibilities, unless the weak points of each are to be considered along with their strong points?

Isn't it a fact that for the past twenty years, we Republicans have been picking nominees who looked strong and victorious, so long as only their assets were regarded, but all of whom turned out in the course of the campaigns to have fatal liabilities which cost our party its success in November?

And isn't it a fact that if these liabilities had been analyzed before and during the convention, and sufficiently well understood in advance, we Republicans might have won any or all of these disastrous campaigns?

How else, except by bringing these possible weaknesses out into the open and studying them are we to avoid the same pitfalls this year? Have you some process in mind by which we can escape hidden flaws and unnoticed defects in the potential candidates unless we have frank and free discussion of them, pro and con, before the convention meets?

Isn't it true, Senator Taylor, that this "no criticism" doctrine is the special strategy produced for the purpose of keeping the delegates from a realistic comparison of General Eisenhower with Senator Taft, "Mr. Republican"? Isn't its sole purpose in this pre-campaign maneuvering that of concealing from the public the complete lack, on the General's part, of any prior contacts either with the ramifications of the national government, or any experience in organizing and conducting a political campaign. Weaknesses which strongly contrast with the fact that Senator Taft is the best informed and most experienced Republican in the country on the key national issues, and moreover has scored some of the most impressive Republican victories seen in recent years.

Isn't it true, also, that whereas the pro-Eisenhower people say constantly in public that, "you mustn't criticize our favorite," they in turn are quite merciless, as well as unscrupulous, in attacking Taft, calling him everything from anti-labor to anti-ediluvian, describing him as reactionary, indecisive, humorless, colorless and a man who simply "can't win", in spite of the fact that the record shows he always has won, and carried Ohio two years ago, against much the same sort of opposition he would face this fall, by the biggest majority in that state's history?

Do you consider it unfair, a form of "destroying a good Republican," to point out that it took General Eisenhower something better than half a century to make up his mind whether he was Republican or Democratic, or that he has never in his life worked with or through a political organization, or that he, unlike Taft, who twice out-debated President Truman on the national air-waves, has never gone before the people championing either a political party or a political philosophy?

Is it irrelevant, impertinent and immaterial to point out that General Eisenhower has spent this spring, during the time when nearly eighty per cent of the delegates have been chosen, pussyfooting among the issues, taking a bold and determined straddle on all controversial subjects and threatening that even if nominated he will do no more than discuss these momentous problems in platitudes and generalities?

Is it out of order to mention such a point, for example, as the fact that multitudes of our citizens are deeply opposed

By Kingsbury Smith
(European General Manager, International News Service)

PARIS, May 31 — (INS) — Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, as new supreme commander of Allied forces, Europe, is tackling one of the toughest jobs of his military career, filled with the possibility of even greater frustrations than he had to contend with in the Korean war.

For one thing, he must consider the catastrophic possibility that he might have to lead the retreat of inadequate Allied forces off the Western European continent if Russia should attack during the next 12 to 18 months.

Ridgway will learn from his de-

Swiss Consul Serving In Phila. Is Club Speaker

Maurice Rohrbach, the Swiss consul serving in Phila., addressed Bristol Exchange Club, Thursday, in the Elks Home.

Mr. Rohrbach explained the governmental structure of Switzerland which is patterned after the constitution of the United States with one notable exception, their president is elected by the Congress for a one-year term and cannot serve more than one term in succession.

The guest stated that Switzerland is about one-half the size of Pennsylvania, has a population of 5,000,000 people, imports two-thirds of its food, imports most of its raw materials, and that the economy is dependent on exports of high quality manufactured products. He also explained the basis of Switzerland's neutrality. The country has firmly followed a policy of no military alliances with any other nations and maintains a strong military establishment to fight off any aggressors. Mr. Rohrbach stated that the Swiss army is three times larger than that of France and is better equipped.

The address was followed by a film covering Mr. Rohrbach's trip to Switzerland last year. After the film he invited questions from the floor.

Programs Presented In Langhorne and Hulmeville Are Impressive

PARADE AT PENNDEL

Keeping strictly to schedule, the Memorial day parades outlined for the Langhorne-Pennel-Hulmeville area yesterday were colorful, several hundred being in line; and the brief programs presented in Langhorne and Hulmeville boroughs were impressive in their simplicity.

MIRACLE IN BROOKLYN

A Brooklyn magistrate took a hands-across-the-sea stand the other day when two visiting Englishmen were brought before him on reckless driving charges.
He acquitted them. But in the process all concerned showed astonishing ignorance of what they were driving—a horse, or two horses, rather.

The arresting officer said he had clocked the two equestrians at 25 miles an hour along a bridge path. The judge couldn't believe that. "Why, Man o'War couldn't go that fast, could he?"

Well, no; Man o'War is dead.
But back in 1920 he was lively enough to run a mile in 1:35 4/5,
an average speed of 37 1/2 m.p.h.
for the distance, which included a turn or two. Any good horse on a fast track nowadays can do better than 35 when he turns it on, though he cannot keep it up for a mile;
and there are even cheap sprinters that can go 35 or better for a few furlongs before folding.

Citation may never have been better than Man o'War, as his admirers claimed. But on the lightning Albany strip in California, he raced a mile in 1:33 3/5, averaging 38.46 m.p.m. for the route.

One of the riders told the judge
his mount was in his eighth year, and "if he was doing 20 it was a miracle." But there are plenty of horses still racing at 9 or 10 or 11 and winning occasional purses, at a pretty fair clip. Any of them could pass a car doing better than 30.

The only miracle was how little
the people knew about horses.

TOURISTS POSE PROBLEM
What might be an indication of returning normal conditions in Europe, with a diminution of the possibility of war, is the rush of American tourists to countries which would be the first affected by conflict.

Russia, running true to form,
has met the tourist tide by shutting off American travel in large areas outside its own legitimate domain, taking the position that all American tourists are potential spies. The State Department has moved mimically to — in a manner of speaking — limit travel of Russians in the United States.

The department is described by one reporter as concerned about the rush of American tourists to European countries, fearing that some will get into trouble and start chain reactions which could develop into international misunderstandings.

Establishment of the iron curtain seems to have aroused American curiosity, and many otherwise sensible Americans are determined to go over to see for themselves what is going on.

Queen Juliana of The Netherlands has returned home after a pleasant four weeks in America and now knows what it is like to write scores of bread-and-butter letters.

Problems Facing General
Ridgway Are Complicated

parting predecessor, Gen. Dwight
D. Eisenhower, and Gen. Alfred M.
Gruenther, who stays on as chief of staff, that the allied forces in Western Europe are not strong enough now, will not be strong enough by the end of this year, and not likely to be strong enough next year to hold the Soviet armies in check if Russia should launch an all-out attack.

He will be told that the greatest problems which confront him in his mission to make Western Europe defensible are economic and psychological.

As Eisenhower learned before him, Ridgway will find out that a majority of the western European people are unwilling to accept lower living standards in order to help create the forces which the military strategists consider essential to hold successfully a defensive line on the Rhine or Elbe rivers in the face of a Soviet onslaught.

Ridgway will learn additionally
that:
1. There is a general tendency among the people to discount the danger of Russia starting a major war with the west.

2. There exists widespread fear that a powerful military build-up in the west, including German rearmament, might be the one thing that would provoke the Russians to attack.

3. A strong belief holds away in western Europe, that the American defense program calls for too much too quickly, and might, if carried out, wreck the economies
of the European allies.

These are the psychological factors with which Ridgway must confront.

ment that no majority exists in the national assembly for ratification.
Implementation of this treaty,
however, is essential for Ridgway to carry out the defense program being entrusted to his care.

That program is designed to make western Europe defensible.
American and other allied defense chiefs are of the opinion it can be made defensible only by the inclusion of German forces in the western military camp. The treaty provides for such inclusion.

If the treaty should not be ratified, Ridgway would be confronted with the necessity of revising drastically the existing defense program.

Gruenther has said failure to implement the EDC treaty would probably lead to adoption of a "re-award" strategy in western Europe.
This would mean abandonment of the efforts to make western Europe defensible, and concentration on the development of bases in Great Britain, North Africa and possibly Spain, from which liberation crusades could be launched if Russia occupied the western European nations.

American defense chiefs have set 1954 as the critical years in relations with Russia. That is the year when they believe Soviet military preparations will reach the war-readiness stage.

The Pentagon program originally called for establishment of 100 allied divisions in western Europe by that year. American's European allies rebelled against the commitments necessary to create such a force. This original program was side-tracked at the Lisbon Conference last February in favor of a plan for the creation of 25 combat-ready and an equal number of reserve divisions by the end of this year.

Eisenhower told this correspondent he believed it might be possible to hold the Russians in check with 25 or 30 divisions if the latter were fully equipped with atomic weapons.

Acquisition of these weapons for the allied forces in Europe is expected to become one of Ridgway's major objectives.

Today's Quiet Moment

By Philip Weiss, Pastor
Oxford Valley Chapel

As we have meditated on the fourth Chapter of Philipians this week, our hearts have truly been blessed with the fact that in such troubled times in a troubled world, peace of mind can be our portion if we but trust in the One who alone can give it. None of us deserve the mercies of God, yet, by His grace we have received of His manifold mercies. It is because of His grace we have salvation and all spiritual and temporal blessings. Every Christian should praise the Lord for His grace for by it we have peace and can preach peace to them who are afar off.

With the benediction of Paul found in II Thess. 3:16, we want to close our meditations together. Now, the Lord of peace Himself give you peace always by all means.

Mr. and Mrs. William Price, Doylestown, were week-end guests at the Cosner home. Bunn Wins Grind At Langhorne Speedway

PENNDLE, May 31 — Holly Bunn of Bristol, Conn., taking the lead on the 82d lap, went on to win the 100-mile modified stock car race at Langhorne Speedway yesterday in one hour, 23 minutes and 04.51 seconds.

Rain fell during the final 35 miles of the event. Ray Baxter of New York was second and Rod Schaefer of Morrisville finished third.

Bunn crossed the finish line, only 16 were still in the running. Five spectators were given first aid treatment on the scene after they were struck by the runaway right rear wheel of the car of Bill Errico, Newtown. The tire bounced off a railing before rolling into the group.

Millions of men have said, with Patrick Henry, 'Give me liberty or give me death' — said it perhaps not with his eloquence, but said it by their deeds in offering themselves on the battlefields of American history.

"We Americans have come to a great crossroads of destiny. I want you to think over the major decisions we must make, as a people and as a nation, within the next few months.

"The world as it used to be has come apart at the seams. Even in the brief space since you and I were in school, the face of the earth has changed. Old nations have fallen, new powers have risen. New theories and new concepts have sprung up. We are in a great testing time. Many have been called, and few chosen. The pillars of civilization have been shaking. Race after race has lost its way on the road to destiny. We can easily see the wreckage which has resulted where other countries have made mistakes.

"The great issue before the American people is whether to cling to the principles of government which we honor on Memorial Day fought for and died to preserve, or whether to let these slip away and seize upon the new concepts brought forward within the present generation.

"How much is liberty worth to us? Our national cemeteries are filled with those who thought it worth dying for. Do we think it worth exerting ourselves for, worth working for, worth studying for, worth being interested in and getting others interested?

"When the American colonies rose against Great Britain, 176 years ago, and proclaimed liberty and independence in this Western Hemisphere, the act burst upon the consciousness of the world as perhaps only one other event in history — the birth of Christ.

"American freedom, the American concepts of government, modified the thinking of all the races of earth. Up to within the past two or three decades, the American pattern was the envy of all. We led the world, not only in commerce and production, but in the field of inspiration.

"How many of us today still understand and still revere the everlasting principles upon which this free nation was founded — the principles of equal justice for all, of God-given native-born rights which government dare not abridge, of the inherent freedom and dignity of the individual, of the right of each citizen to think as he will, worship as he chooses, and to seek happiness after his own fashion?

"Do we still hold up these models for our children? Do our schools teach them, and our churches, and our press, and our radio, and all the other many instruments of education advocate them?

"Daniel Webster said that 'God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it.' Two thousand years earlier, the Greek philosopher Aristotle expressed the same thought — that 'liberty and equality will be best attained when all persons alike share in the government to the utmost.'

"Do not misunderstand me — I'm not talking politics; I'm not telling you to vote for or against any candidate, not telling you to support or oppose any party.

"Patriotism, zeal for the preservation of all that is splendid in our Constitution, is not the exclusive prerogative of any political party. Whichever party you consider to be yours, you will find in it those who have a deep and never-dying loyalty to the concepts of our founding fathers, who brought forth upon this continent the most nearly perfect system of government which it has ever been mankind's lot to discover.

"I am asking you to learn and to understand that system of government, asking you to refuse to consider discarding it for any other until you have examined both of them fully.

"Liberty and justice are the cornerstones of our free government. Justice has but one true guardian, and that consists of independent and high-principled courts which can fearlessly uphold the rights of the weak against the pressures of the mighty.

"Never in five thousand years of history has mankind even dimly glimpsed any other avenue to justice. A free and uncorruptible judiciary is humanity's hope, so far as justice is concerned. Whatever contaminates our courts is a dagger at the throat of justice, a knife in the back of every man's rights.

"As for liberty, again mankind has wrestled with the problem for all the ages he has been living together, and he has found only one principle which gives citizens a chance to preserve their freedom against the encroachments of government.

"The principle was discovered ages ago, but it has been only within recent centuries that it has been put into effect as the fruit of long and stubborn warfare conducted by heroes risen out of the ranks of freedom-loving peoples.

"The principle is that the laws shall be written, and the taxes shall be levied, only by representatives chosen by the people themselves, and answerable only to the people. This is the legislative principle, in this country taking the form of a national Congress that is one of the three separate branches of our Federal government.

"In the time which it has been my happy privilege to serve you as your Representative in Congress, I have heard Congress upbraided and scolded, condemned and derided, often by those who understood only faintly what the purpose of Congress is, and what it has been seeking to do.

"Congress is the people's own special branch of our government. It is the only one which the people elect directly, and the only one which comes back at frequent intervals to render an accounting to the people.

"Winning by the American people of the right to choose their own Congress was one of the greatest and most prized accomplishments of the American Revolution.

"Let me remind you of just one point — that when the early American heroes of the Revolution won victories against the British, they

proudly proclaimed those victories as being 'in the name of the Continental Congress.'

"Ladies and gentlemen, Abraham Lincoln expressed what is in the heart of all those who rise to consecrate the memory of fallen war heroes.

"He said that in their lives and in their deaths, these heroes already have hallowed the ground in which they lie.

"The great thing, Lincoln said, is for us the living to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought have thus far so nobly advanced.

"That is what I have been trying to say to you. Generation after generation of Americans furnished the flower of its youth, first to create the nation, then to save it united under one flag, and more recently to hurl back those who conspired against it from abroad.

"Friends and fellow Americans, what the blood and tears of these fallen predecessors of ours so nobly won for us, and so bravely preserved in the critical hours of the past, let us hereby resolve to maintain and protect, to labor for and love, all the days of our lives."

Three Boroughs Join In Memorial Parade

heroism of those brave men and women who have given their lives for their country." He continued on to express the thought that "all should remember the dying pain of the brave men who saved our nation, the mothers and wives who gave their husbands and sons to their country, and the spirit of loyal devotion typified by their acts. We should never forget the tears and praises poured forth when some of our dead were brought home for burial. Many did not return, but rest on foreign shores or at places known only to God." The speaker concluded with this: "They gave themselves. What more can a man do for a cause than to die for it?"

Robert Armstrong an 8th grade pupil, was presented with the American Legion school award medal.

When the parade reached the Woods School, Bellevue avenue, a bouquet of red, white and blue flowers was presented by Mrs. William Gotthardt, Bristol twp., on behalf of Hulmeville Boy Scout troop, to Mr. Keating, Philadelphia, half-breed Indian who marched (in Indian costume) with the troop.

The second parade in Langhorne was staged by members of Langhorne Memorial Association, following a special Memorial service in Langhorne A. M. E. Church. The James Moore Memorial Band led the group, with Mitchell Davis Post, American Legion, and its junior drum and bugle corps following in blue and white uniforms. Girl and

Boy Scout groups, school children, and a float were included.

A number of the same groups which participated in Langhorne parade continued through Pennell and Hulmeville. The line of march was joined in Hulmeville, however, by Hulmeville school children, Girl Scouts and Brownies. Richard A. Hopkins, past commander of Soby Post, was marshal for Hulmeville parade; and the Neshaminy high school band was the official musical group there. The Parkland AMVETS stood at attention during the program in Hulmeville Memorial Park, a squad from this unit firing a salute to the dead.

Welcome was extended by former burgess of Hulmeville, Samuel J. Illick. The prayer was by the Rev. E. Clarendon Hyde, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Hulmeville; and the high school band provided selections. For one of these "Military Escort," Sally Hall did a twirling solo. "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address" was given by "Jack" Crawford. The American Legion school medal for honor, courage, scholarship, leadership, service and companionship, was presented to Patricia Foster by Peter Kutger, a member of Soby Post. Thirty seconds of silence was observed in memory of the war dead.

The thought about which the Rev. Edward W. Stuess, pastor of Neshaminy Methodist Church, wove his remarks was that "merely to remember those who have gone before is not enough. . . . Memory alone can hardly be worthy honor for those who gave their all." The "crucial question" he added is: "Can all these agonies, and wound-bearing and blood-shed teach us to live?" the clergyman said that "We are possibly closer to total war than to total peace," and reminded of the meaning behind the sacrifices made by those who served their country well.

ance," adding "we as a people have grasped the mystery of the atom and rejected the sermon on the mount. . . . we know more about fighting than about peace. . . . more about killing than living." He reminded of the phrase in the address of Lincoln how our forefathers established "a nation under God." It was mentioned that many would turn the constitution to read "freedom from religion" rather than "freedom of religion." He reminded that in the great struggle for the triumph of righteousness, the greatest weapon is faith.

"Let us not misinterpret the meaning of Memorial day. We cherish the memory of these we honor today because they died that a great nation might live and bless the world. . . . We should resolve to strengthen the spiritual roots of life."

Hulmeville-Middletown Parent-Teacher Association provided refreshments for the children who marched, they being served in Wm. Penn Fire Co. station.

MEANING OF MEMORIAL DAY

The Rev. Clifford Pollock, of Morrisville Presbyterian Church, delivered an inspirational talk on the meaning of Memorial day to members of Bristol Rotary Club, Thursday. He dwelt particularly on it as a day of recollection, as a day of decorating, and last but not least, as a day of resolution. "We must realize the true purpose of Memorial day," he stated, "with the whole world in an upset condition we must overcome selfishness and take time for introspection."

HULMEVILLE

"Parents' Night" was observed by Redskin Troop 22, Boy Scouts, in Grace Episcopal Church parish house, Thursday evening. A display of craft-work was arranged. Pioneer patrol gave a first aid demonstration; Flaming Arrow Patrol displayed trail signs; and the Scouts presented a program of songs and games. A number of parents were in attendance.

to the concept of putting a professional career soldier in the White House, bitterly determined to raise up no Bismarks in America; and that such factors as the General's determination to set up universal military training might easily lose us millions of votes?

You ask for unity and, if we understand you aright, for no critical analysis of the candidates. You of all people ought to be in good position to see the fallacies of such a program. You were State Chairman back in 1936 when the Republican national convention, in a perfect tempest of unity, with almost complete unanimity, on the first ballot, not a voice of criticism or warning to be heard, nominated another Man from Kansas, whose broad position politically is quite similar to that nebulous stand taken by General Eisenhower, of whom in fact it might be said with some justice that that the General is another Alf Landon, in khaki.

We had unity, that year, and we had abundant optimism before the campaign, and we had no critical judgment exercised in the selection of our candidate.

What happened? We lost Pennsylvania by more than 650,000. The phrase, "Taft can't win", continues to echo. Taft won Ohio two years ago by 600,000 majority. How did the last Man from Kansas make out there? Landon lost Ohio in 1936 by more than 700,000 votes.

Isn't it possible, Senator, that you are wrong in this matter, and that what we Republicans ought to do, instead of sticking our heads in the sands as regards the disqualifications of some of our potential candidates, is to run them through the gauntlet of the most vigorous and open criticism, and then, instead of backing an untried and untested champion in the race, pin our faith on the man who stands up best under the most exacting inspection.
